The Taste of Freedom Cookbook Project was created to celebrate Juneteenth, an African American holiday commemorating the abolition of slavery in the United States. The cookbook includes recipes and archival photographs of Texas first Juneteenth celebration along with archival photographs of the staff’s families.

Posted digitally on an online journal site, within 6 months the cookbook had been viewed over 6000 times in 24 countries.

A Taste of Freedom (2) will be a continuation of the first book with collaboration from additional HBCUs and archival photographs from the Texas community.

The project was a unique way of including history, preservation, archives and social activism in something that is interesting, practical and uses technology to promote cultural diversity.
